Midnight in Paris

*Running time: 94 Minutes

Woody Allen's unapologetic love letter to the City of Light. In his first feature shot entirely in France, Owen Wilson (The Darjeeling Limited, Marley and Me) plays a frustrated American writer who longs for the Paris of old and gets what he wants each night at midnight, when he is magically whisked away for encounters with some of the great artists and thinkers of the 20th century.

Also starring Rachel McAdams and Marion Cotillard.

Tree of Life

*Running time: 138 Minutes

A visual poem that contemplates the nature of time, space and spirituality, starring Brad Pitt, Sean Penn and Jessica Chastain.

A family is devastated by the loss of one of its three sons. The fragmented, non-linear narrative that ensues oscillates between the boys' suburban 1950s Texas upbringing with their over-bearing father and uplifting mother (Pitt and Chastain), a contemporary urban landscape in which the eldest son (Penn) struggles with the scars of youth, and a series of transcendent images from the prehistoric to the cosmic, giving metaphoric scope to their journey.
